FAMOUS CASE DECIDED AGAINST IRRIGATION CO.

river at Elephant Butte, N. M., where it was its declared intention of creating the largest artificial irrigation lake in the world. The government brought suit to prohibit the improvement on the ground that it would interfere with treaty rights between the United States and Mexico and also that it would obstruct the navigation of the Rio Grande, which, It was declared, was practicable all the way up the stream to La Joya and 100 miles above the proposed dam.
